Lebanon Ballet School has hired Bryan Lewis for the 2010/2011 year. Mr. Lewis has an extensive knowledge of the Russian Vaganova ballet technique. He has performed a variety of principal roles throughout this country and abroad with numerous dance companies. He has also worked as a master teacher with prominent professional ballet schools and companies and as an artist in residence at universities

Mr. Lewis will be teaching intermediate/advanced level ballet classes for students ages 12 and 18; boys classes for ages 12 and up; variation and choreography classes.

“When I was asked to come to Lebanon Ballet, I was thrilled to find such highly trained young dancers. The students worked hard and loved the challenges to grow. It was a wonderful experience to work with the teachers who had laid down such solid foundations; I felt immediately at home with the young dancers and their teachers. I was delighted when I was asked to become a full time member of their faculty in the Fall, and am eager to return during the summer workshops to continue to develop these students into meeting their full potential.” -Bryan Lewis
